'What's the appeal?

Just like most social media, TikTok is supposed to be addictive – and ByteDance has got it down to a tee. The app's recommendation mechanism is simple. It analyses everything you do. It checks what kind of users you follow, which videos you like, what kind of content you watch the most, and then it gives you more of that. Thanks to a feature called the For You Page (commonly abbreviated as FYP), TikTok keeps feeding you content that suits your interests best. You recently followed a comedian who specialises in dark humour? Expect to see more of that from other users on your For You Page. The FYP is the first thing users see when they open the app. All it takes to keep having fun is to scroll down, and before you know it, you've watched a hundred videos – all selected to your liking.'

to analyse	to suit	recently	before you know it

straight away	not long ago	to go with	to scrutinise
